If an inmate’s behavior is so disruptive as to compromise the supervisor’s ability to manage the work program environment effectively, the supervisor may initiate an assignment change. Changes under these circumstances shall require a disciplinary report that documents the disruptive actions as well as an “unsatisfactory” evaluation rating.
- 3.4.2.4 Security Threat – If an inmate is determined to be a threat to the security or order of the institution if left in the current assignment, the supervisor shall notify the Chief of Security and provide the rationale in an Information Report. The Chief of Security shall ensure the case is investigated and, if it is determined a legitimate security threat exists, the Correctional Officer IV shall be notified to change the inmate’s assignment.
- 3.4.2.5 Institutional Needs – The Correctional Officer IV may reassign an inmate unilaterally based on specific needs of the institution or other reasons indicating the reassignment is in the best interest of the Department.
